Admittedly, two complex processes are being heavily caricatured here, but we don't want to (for now) print posters with them either;-). The idea that storks bring babies dates back to the 18th century. It was believed that the stork fetches children from a well and delivers them to parents. In the 21st century, mineral spring owners have buses printed with sweeping claims about health-beneficial minerals in their waters. This often raises the question of whether the advertising film improves the air resistance of the bus more than the minerals improve the mineral balance of consumers. Because minerals in mineral water burden the body under certain conditions, particularly when they are present in very high concentrations and when the water has lost its natural structure.

"Water and minerals are the fundamental elements of life on Earth", according to clinic director Dr. Stockwell, who became known for his research on the topic of minerals beyond the borders of the USA

It's good.
